CONNECTING MERCER COUNTY

WHAT IS CONNECTING MERCER COUNTY?

A Collaborative Community Project

Connecting Mercer County is a collaborative community transportation project funded by Buhl Regional Health Foundation. The project has a Mobility Manager who will serve as a nexus of information for all transportation options in the service area.

The goal of Connecting Mercer County is to identify gaps in existing transportation options for under-served populations, including healthcare and other social determinants of health and well-being. The Mobility Manager will be well versed in all available options and establish connections and contacts with agencies in the area. Community residents will have access to a phone line, through which the Mobility Manager will coordinate requests, connecting residents to services.

CMC Details

- The primary service area is the Shenango Valley, but will include the entirety of the Buhl Regional Health Foundation's service area.
- The Mobility Manager will construct a strong evidence base from which to organize project partners to best address area transportation needs.
- Connecting Mercer County seeks to connect community residents to healthcare services, as well as a number of social services, improving their overall health and well-being.
